HINTS AND TIPS

HOW DO I LOOK AFTER MY HOSTAS?

Hostas are hardy perennial woodland plants that love shady, moist conditions so:

- give them plenty of shelter: preferably from trees, but walls and fences can do the job too
- don't let them dry out, BUT don't let them become water-logged: either stand pots in a dish or tray and water from the bottom. This allows the plant to take all it needs and takes the guess work out of watering.

There are a handful of cultivars that can withstand full sun, but we recommend you provide good levels of shade for the very best colour. Cultivars with white in the leaf are especially prone to scorching and can be damaged by drying warm winds as well as direct sunlight. Scorching reduces the white areas on a leaf to a papery, dry consistency, so you will be able to see the damage at an early stage. If your plant does exhibit damage then try to provide more shelter for it.

Hostas are also prone to weather damage if exposed to heavy winds and rain, so planting in a well sheltered spot will help protect against this. Over winter, we suggest you leave your pots on their sides to avoid waterlogging and then freezing, as this can damage the root system of your plants (and your lovely pots).

If you are collecting miniature hostas then we recommend you pop them into containers for the first few years, until they have established themselves sufficiently to compete with the other plants in your garden.

WHAT SHOULD I FEED MY HOSTA?

As woodland plants, hostas gain their nutrients through the continual decomposition of rotting leaf litter. Therefore, they do not require very much in the way of food. If your hostas live in pots then give them a couple of feeds of half-strength 'Tomorite' during the year, but no more. All our sales plants, and the majority of our parent plants, are grown in pots and we apply a seaweed feed in the spring as the only feed for the year.

If your hostas are planted in the garden, the application of well rotted manure or garden compost, when the plants enter dormancy in the autumn, will serve them well during the winter. Top dressing with the same in the spring, together with an application of slug pellets, will give the plants an extra boost during emergence, whilst combatting early damage by slugs emerging from hibernation. An early top dressing can also help protect the emerging shoots from late frosts.

CAN I DIVIDE MY HOSTA?

Yes, but we recommend you wait until the spring and see how your hosta looks as it emerges. If the new shoots are looking a bit crowded, that is a sign the plant would benefit from dividing. If your plant is pot-bound, it may throw up premature flower spikes rather than produce leaves - this is a sure sign that the plant is under stress. Dividing hostas is easy - details of how to do this can be found in our May 2007 and December 2009 newsletters, available on our website.

DEAR GARDENER

Welcome to our 2010 catalogue.

This year we are offering more than 840 varieties for sale. Varieties newly available from us are marked with an asterisk *

The alphabetical listing provides plant details as follows:

Name Price
Generic plant mound size (see table):
dimensions
Leaf: dimensions, dominant colouring of leaf centre, colour of margins if variegated. Flower: colour

Classification	Height of plant mound
Mini	up to 6"
Small	7" - 12"
Medium	13" - 18"
Large	19" - 24"
Giant	25" or more

We have also indicated which varieties the American Hosta Society have classed as mini, based upon leaf area with the following symbol: AHS✓

We provide much more information and lots of images on our website:

MAIL ORDER INFORMATION

Plants are supplied bare-rooted, wrapped in damp newspaper, ready for planting. Hostas are happy to be bare-rooted for a while providing they do not dry out, and by using first class post we can ensure minimum delay.

We generally despatch on Thursdays so the plants should reach you by the weekend. Please allow 21 days for delivery (from the date of order) and notify us of any dates when you will be unable to take receipt of the consignment.

We are now able to take payment by all major credit and debit cards, except American Express, throughout the year.

Our despatch season normally runs from the end of March to the end of October. All plants are offered subject to availability. Some varieties are in very short supply so please state if substitutes are acceptable in the event of a chosen variety being sold out.

To give your hostas the best start, plant in a well prepared humus rich soil that is sufficiently friable to ensure good contact with the roots. Make sure they do not dry out whilst establishing themselves, but do not over water. Removing flowering shoots for the first season will encourage plants to concentrate their energies on producing more crowns and strong roots. More hints and tips can be found at the end of the catalogue.

POST AND PACKING

We have frozen postage prices for 2010:
